

For the second year in a row, the American association "Racers Who Care" brought four young Porsche drivers to visit the hospitalized children on Friday afternoon at the CHPG on the sidelines of their participation in the Formula 1 Grand Prix of Monaco.

The four promising young drivers, aged 20, smiled and cheerful, went from room to room to go out, sign autographs and give some gifts to each child.

Young drivers Dennis Olsen (Norway), Matt Campbell (Australia), Nico Rindlimbacher (Switzerland) and Steven Palette (France), then returned to the circuit to prepare their race scheduled for Sunday morning.
